Running Head: HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR STORIES	1
Holocaust Survivor Stories Nimcheski English 10 December 22, 2016 The initial Jewish population of Europe before World War II was 9.5 million. 63% were killed and 37% survived. In Poland, only 9% of all Jews survived the Holocaust (The History Place, 1996). The Holocaust was an extremely disturbing event in history. Nazi political goals caused the mass murder of nearly 6 million Jews. From the ashes of this atrocity, many survivors have come forward to tell their stories. The survivor stories of Simon Wiesenthal, Elie Wiesel, and Viktor Frankl, outline the horrific conditions in concentration camps and the strategies of control used by the Nazis to control and exterminate almost an entire population of people.

HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR STORIES	5
The survivor stories of Wiesenthal, Wiesel, and Frankl conveyed the deplorable conditions in concentration camps and inhumane treatment of Jews. Wiesenthal's story reminds society of the effects that the Holocaust had on children. Elie Wiesel's story points out the terrible crimes committed by humans toward other humans, and Frankl's story pointed out the dehumanization of the Jews. "To forget the Holocaust is to kill twice." This quote by Elie Wiesel truly summarizes the reason behind the survivor stories. Each survivor told their story in order to never allow something like the Holocaust to happen again.
